The Fourth Man: And other famous sermons (Voices from the Healing Revival Book 40)

Indeed, the determination of the location of the wound to the back--on the basis of the shirt, the jacket, the autopsy diagram, the FBI sketch, Berkley's death certificate, and re-enactment photographs--establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the "magic bullet" theory is not only provably false but--as David Mantik has demonstrated--is not even anatomically possible, which means the wound to the throat and those to Connally require other shots and shooters. While I can honestly say this book is not one of my favorite Howard reads, I know of many readers who found it terrific.
